

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I would like to thank all of my refugee, cultural anthropology, and creative writing teachers, friends, and family who made this book possible in various obvious and subtle ways, past and present.

For all of the refugee outreach and support you provide: Africa Education and Leadership Initiative: Bridging Gender Gaps through Education, for Anita Henderlight, the dazzling force behind the Africa Education and Leadership Initiative (<http://www.africaeli.org>), Vermont Refugee Resettlement Program, Association of Africans Living in Vermont, Mercy Connections, Wazirgul Hashimi at Vermont Afghan Alliance, Tuipate Mubiay at Conversation Partners, Community College of Vermont, University of Vermont's Connecting Cultures, New England Survivors of Trauma and Torture. For all of the people at the Observing Minds Lab in Haifa working to bring mindfulness to refugees.

For their warm and gracious hospitality in Darjeeling and insight into sex trafficking in West Bengal, thanks to Paulzor Drukpa and Nirnay Chetri.

For Sioksian Pek Dorji for her always gracious welcomes in Bhutan.

For Buddhist teachers His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama, Pico Iyer, Robert Thurman, Mathieu Ricard, Tara Brach, Jack Kornfield, Laughing River Yoga, Brian Tobin, Pema Chödrön, Chögyam Trungpa, Robert Wright, and David Foster Wallace (This Is Water) and for my dear husband, Robert Jan Lair, for his dogged and fearless optimism, big mind, and wide Buddhist perspective, always my best editor and very best friend.

For Atem Deng, Adieu, Aluel, Susu, Deborah, and Jurkuch, my South Sudanese family. For Sadig Babur, my Nuba son.

For my beloved children, Ana and Willem, for their deeply artistic souls, their love and loyalty to our home in Vermont, for laughter and kindness, and my mother, Suzanne, for all of her love, fire, and wisdom through the years. For Neera, my dear Nepali daughter.

For Bruce Weigl for his endless compassion, humor, encouragement, and epic feedback; for Peter Connors at BOA Editions for giving me a start; for Misha Cahnmann, Renato Rosaldo, Kim Gutschow, Liz Powell, Barbara Murphy, Angie Palm, Karla Van Vliet, Stephen Cramer, Tim Seibles, Brian Turner, Yusef Komunyakaa, Uwem Akpan, Dave Eggers, Laura Dickerman, Dana Walrath, Jen Gates, Carolyn Forché, David Huddle, and Michael Simms.

For Toni Messuri, Richard Does, Amy Seybolt, Ann Linde, Leslie Gibbons, Crystal L'Hote, Kathy Hanson, Rachel Inker, Trevien Stanger, Christina Root, Rai Farrelly, Jason Bagdade, John Izzi, Christine Rushforth, Roxanne Scully, Becky Hill, Vince Bolduc, Jasmine Lamb, and Chet Scerra. For Karl, Nicola, Paul, and Serena.

For Anne Brackenbury for guiding me through the submission process with such kindness and warmth. For Dean Smith, my editor at Duke University Press, for being so enthusiastic and supportive of my attempt to meld poetry, memoir, and anthropology into one.

For anthropologists, sociologists, and journalists I have admired and learned from: Philippe Bourgois, Paul Farmer, Ethan Watters, Pierre Bourdieu, Rachel Aviv, Roy Richard Grinker, Nancy Scheper-Hughes, Tanya Luhrmann, Katherine Boo, Michael Pollan, Ruth Behar, Sebastian Junger, Daniel Everett, Kevin Bales, Jill Bolte Taylor, Eliza Griswold, Kathleen Stewart, Anne Fadiman, Robert and Sarah LeVine, Nastassja Martin, Rob and Rindi Gordon, Robert Jay Lifton, Edie Turner, and Dell Hymes.

For the Society for Humanistic Anthropology for encouraging anthropologists to write from the heart.

Also thanks to the Mind and Life Institute Summer Research Fellowship, Arthur Kleinman, Byron Good, and Charles Lindholm at Harvard University; Michael Jackson and Wendy McDowell at Harvard Divinity School; Anand Pandian for inviting me to the School for Advanced Research Seminar long ago. For Christopher Merrill and Catherine Filloux for an eye-opening time in South Sudan with the University of Iowa International Writing Program.

For St. Michael's College, and my sociology/anthropology department, for giving me the width and support to be both an anthropologist and a creative writer over the years. For my students who take the work of helping and learning from refugees deeply to heart.

For my father, 1924–1975. For the land where I grew up, now live, and return over and over: the mountain, the meadows, trees, flowers, and animals of Underhill, Vermont.

I would like to thank the editors of the following journals, in which these pieces have appeared, some in altered form, under different titles.

Alaska Quarterly Review: “Last Week, Tied to My Intravenous Pole”

American Poetry Review: “Patchwork Quilt for a Congolese Refugee”

Anthropologica: Journal of the Canadian Anthropological Society: “One Life to Live: Resignation Syndrome”; “Refugee Encounters with Feelings of the Capitalist Kind”; “Skateboarding, Malmö, Sweden”; “Technotropic”

Anthropology and Humanism: “American Bardo”; “Patchwork Quilt for a Congolese Refugee”

The Best American Poetry 2008: “Skull Trees, South Sudan”

Crumpled Paper Boat: Experiments in Ethnographic Writing: “On the Brilliance of Your Story”

Diode: “A Brief Respite from the Usual Divides”; “Cybirds”

Green Mountains Review: “The Choice”; “The Human TechnoBody Meets Quarantine”; “I Watch My Daughter Snort Google”

Harvard Divinity Bulletin: “After His Death, God Looks Down on a Yoga Class”; “Tulip Fever”

Harvard Review: “The Sweaty Tribe/From Heaven, Mother Theresa Looks Down on Daya Dan”

Himalaya: The Journal of the Association of Nepal and Himalayan Studies: “American Bardo”; “Himalayan Facebook Fiction”

The Hopper: “Hush, Humans”

Juxtapose: “Field Notes—Nursing Home Fieldwork with Students”; “Psychocolonialism”

Kenyon Review: “Skull Trees”

New England Review: “Breathe with Me Barbie”; “The Fat Claw of My Heart”; “Home of Confident Children Out of Conflict”; “Mating Knot”; “Trauma, Inc.”

Open: Journal of Arts and Letters: “Quarantine Dreams”; “Revised Lonely Planet Guide to Holy Men”

Peripheries: A Journal of Word and Image: “Happiness, Inc.”

Plume: “What Makes Us (Not) Buddhists”

Poetry at Sangam (guest edited by Brian Turner): “The Dalai Lama and God Look Down on a Snowball Fight”; “The Dalai Lama Looks Down on a Yoga Class”; “The Dalai Lama Looks Down on Humans in the Modern West”

Prairie Schooner: “South Sudan Elegy”

Rattle: Poets Respond to the News: “After His Death, the Dalai Lama Looks Down on a Yoga Class”

River Teeth: “COVID Subnivean”

Roads Taken (“Contemporary Vermont Poetry” issue, edited by Sydney Lea and Chard Niord): “Patchwork Quilt for a Congolese Refugee”

Salmagundi: “Jésus, Immaculée, and the Pig”; “Patchwork Quilt for a Congolese Refugee”; “Refugee Christmas Eve”

Slippery Elm: “Happiness, Inc.”

Vox Populi: “Breathe with Me Barbie”; “The Dalai Lama and God Look Down on a Snowball Fight”; “The Dalai Lama Looks Down on Earth”; “Happiness, Inc.”; “This Is What Sorrow Looks Like”

War Literature and the Arts: “Jésus, Immaculée, and the Pig”; “Patchwork Quilt for a Congolese Refugee”; “Refugee Christmas Eve”; “South Sudan Elegy”